
CHAMPLAIN PARKWAY ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT FOCUS JUNE 9, 2010

INTRODUCTION

The Champlain Parkway will serve the development area and the Economic Enterprise Zone of the City. The City has supported development in the Enterprise Zone by working with property owners to create affordable business incubator space. The result has been the redevelopment of many older buildings, new businesses entering the area, and businesses expanding in the area. Notable business achievements include the following:

RENOVATED BUILDINGS WITH NEW BUSINESSES:

- Former Specialty Filaments building converted into the home for the national headquarters for Dealer.com at the corner of Pine and Howard Streets. The City of Burlington provided financial and technical support to Dealer.com and Specialty Filaments.
- Former McAuliff's Office Products Incubator building at 208 Flynn Ave.
- Lane Press converted into the Kilburn and Gates Incubator Building at 1 Kilburn Street.
- Former Maltex breakfast cereal building converted into the Maltex Incubator Building at 431 Pine Street with financial and technical support from the City of Burlington.
- George Little Press building at 750 Pine Street converted into the home for the national headquarters for Lake Champlain Chocolates with financial and technical support from the City of Burlington.

TRADITIONAL COMMERCIAL-INDUSTRIAL BUSINESSES

- Blodgett Oven Co., operating in Burlington since 1848, recently renovated an underutilized portion of their building complex to accommodate additional growth for their business. A new equipment product line, developed for Kentucky Fried Chicken, has been very successful.
- Burton Snowboards purchased a second building in the Burlington Industrial Park. They also lease additional space in the Enterprise Zone. They will be designing and building new prototype snowboards in Burlington.
- Rhino Foods converted a former General Electric factory building and is now making Cookie Dough ingredients for companies like Ben & Jerry's.

The Champlain Parkway will serve the Enterprise Zone and support the accessibility of these existing businesses, new businesses, and expanding businesses. The following section will describe how the Champlain Parkway will support the goals and priorities that CEDO has developed for the City for the next few years
